Tri-Ess is a non-profit educational, social and support group for heterosexual cross-dressers, their partners or spouses, and their families. It is international in scope with over thirty chapters in the United States and is a member of the World Congress of Transgender Organizations and the International Foundation for Gender Education.

History

The story of Tri-Ess and the growth of its movement owes much to the efforts of Virginia Charles Prince (born Arnold Lowman, 1912-2009) to an upper-middle class family in Los Angeles. Prince, who identified himself as heterosexual, had nevertheless begun wearing women's clothes at the age of 12. He earned a Ph.D in biochemistry in 1939, started a career with the University of California medical school in San Francisco, and married in 1941. At first, his wife tolerated his cross-dressing but later divorced him on the grounds of homosexuality. Despite his exposure in the press as a transvestite, Prince married a second time. The consequent publicity led other cross-dressers to contact him leading to the formation and development of a support group in Los Angeles. In 1959, Prince founded Transvestia, a comprehensive magazine for cross-dressers, while embarking on a career to bring cross-dressing "out-of the closet" into the public eye. He established a national organization known as Full Personality Expression (FPE) in 1962

In 1971, Carol Beecroft, a former FPE chapter president, left the organization to form the Mamselle Sorority, an "open" group for cross-dressers which later merged with FPE in 1976 to become The Society for the Second Self (Tri-Ess). Tri-Ess web site: <http://www.tri-ess.org>

Provenance

Tri-Ess donated its records to the Library's Special Collections and Archives over a period of several years in 1994, 1997, 1998, and 2002. The records are part of the Vern and Bonnie Bullough Collection on Sex and Gender.

Scope & Contents Note

The collection contains the records of Tri-Ess and its chapters since its inception in 1976 through 2005. The collection consists of correspondence, directories, corporate documents, flyers, ephemera, newsletters, and photographs. There is considerable documentation on the initial organization of Tri-Ess and numerous publications about cross-dressing.

CSUN Oviatt Library Special Collections

The latter part of the collection is primarily comprised of correspondence from cross-dressers with some from academics researching the cross-dressing movement. Correspondents with two or more letters are filed by name. Correspondents with only one letter are grouped together and filed chronologically.
